

C.L. Taylor,

Toy Hoop.

No. 102,988.

Patented May 10. 1870.

Fig. 2.

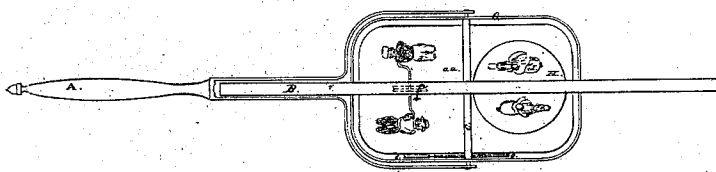

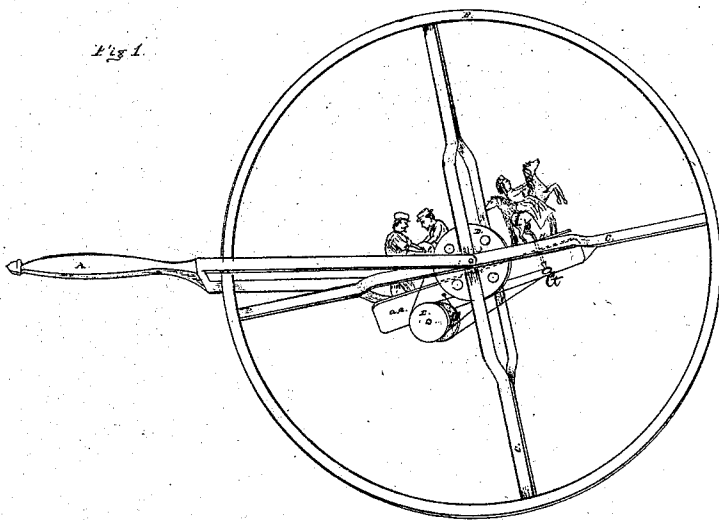

Fig. 1.

Thos. N. Sterry.
Eugene M. Southard } Witnesses to Signature.

Cebra L. Taylor

United States Patent Office.

CEBRA L. TAYLOR, OF NORWICH, CONNECTICUT.

Letters Patent No. 102,988, dated May 10, 1870.

TOY HOOP.

The Schedule referred to in these Letters Patent and making part of the same.

To all whom it may concern:

Be it known that I, CEBRA L. TAYLOR, of Norwich, in the county of New London and State of Connecticut, have invented a so-called Novelty Hoop, designed to give healthful exercise and amusement to children; and I do hereby declare that the following is a full, clear, and exact description of the same, reference being had to the annexed drawings making a part of this specification.

Figure 1 is a side view, elevated.

Figure 2 is a top view.

A represents a bifurcated handle of a trundling hoop.

B represents such a hoop.

C C represent spokes of said hoop, and so constructed as to form an open box or oblong frame, at and near the center of the diameter.

a a represent a platform, placed within the open box formed by the spokes.

D represents a pulley inside the box or frame, and made fast to the spokes, so as to be driven by the motion of the hoop.

E represents a smaller pulley, belted to D, and turning a shaft which is suspended from the platform a a.

F represents a double pulley on the same shaft with E, one belt from which drives the pulley f, rising from the platform a a, the other belt driving the pulley G.

H represents a ar platform, rising above a part of the platform a a, and resting on a shaft driven by the pulley G.

I denotes images or figures, of any sort or kind, placed upon the platforms, and moving with the motion of the hoop, as designed.

I claim as my invention—

The combination and arrangement of the open spoked hoop, the furcated handle, the shaft, the driving-wheel, and the toys or automata, with their operative mechanism, to be actuated by such wheel, as set forth.

CEBRA L. TAYLOR.

Witnesses:

THOS. N. STERRY,
EUGENE W. SARTHARD.