PROCESS OF MAKING TETRAMETHYLENDIAMIN.

965,903.

Specification of Letters Patent.

Patented Aug. 2, 1910.

No Drawing.

Application filed April 12, 1910. Serial No. 554,938.

To all whom it may concern:

Be it known that we, FRITZ HOFMANN and CARL COUTELLE, doctors of philosophy, chemists, citizens of the German Empire, residing at Elberfeld, Kingdom of Prussia, German Empire, have invented new and useful Improvements in Processes of Making Tetramethylen-diamin, of which the following is a specification.

Our invention relates to a new and valuable process for producing tetramethylen-diamin which is a valuable intermediate compound for the production of pharmaceutical compounds, dyestuffs, etc.

The new process consists in treating the diamid of adipic acid with solutions of halogens in caustic alkaline lyes.

In order to illustrate the new process more fully the following example is given, the parts being by weight:—142 parts of chlorin are introduced into a mixture of 1000 parts of caustic soda lye (33 per cent) with 1200 parts of ice. Subsequently 144 parts of the diamid of adipic acid are slowly added. The temperature rises to 70–80° C. while the diamid enters into solution. Against the end of the reaction the mixture is heated on the water bath for 4 to 6 hours and the base is driven over in a current of steam.

The process is carried out in an analogous manner on using bromin instead of chlorin.

We claim:—

The process for producing tetramethylen-diamin, which process consists in treating the diamid of adipic acid with a solution of halogen in caustic alkaline lyes, substantially as described.

In testimony whereof we have hereunto set our hands in the presence of two subscribing witnesses.
