(54) Title: PROCESSING MODULE FOR A COMPUTER SYSTEM DEVICE

(57) Abstract: A processing module converts an input signal, which is generated in a computer system device, into a digital output signal at a video output. The digital output signal is adapted to be visualised by a display device. The processing module comprises scaling means for scaling a resolution of the output signal to match a resolution of the display device. The processing module can be combined with a display adapter which incorporates graphical processing and memory means. Furthermore, the processing module may comprise selection means for selecting a resolution for the output signal, corresponding to a resolution of the display device.
