MARY R. LUCK, OF DALLAS, TEXAS, ASSIGNOR OF ONE-HALF TO N. R. McELROY, OF NEW ORLEANS, LOUISIANA.

SLEEVELESS ONE-PIECE ROBE.

Application filed February 12, 1925. Serial No. 8,809.

To all whom it may concern:

Be it known that I, MARY R. LUCK, a citizen of the United States, residing at Dallas, in the county of Dallas and State of Texas, have invented certain new and useful Improvements in Sleeveless One-Piece Robes, of which the following is a specification.

This invention relates to wearing apparel and in such connection it has more particular reference to a bath and dressing robe, also an accessory to pajamas, male and female, and ceremonial and lodge robes for either sex.

The primary object of the invention is to provide a sleeveless robe constructed entirely of one piece of cloth as an economizing means in manufacture and providing in the elimination of the sleeves a robe of greater utility, since the sleeves are not necessary as in shaving, dressing and other preparations of the toilet. As a slip-on robe it is very handy and practical.

With the above objects in view, the invention will be more clearly understood by reference to the following description in connection with the accompanying drawings, forming part hereof and in which:

Figure 3 is a top view of the robe, comprising the pattern, showing its appearance when cut and ready to be sewn together, the top portion only being shown for convenience of illustration.

In carrying out the invention, the material of which the garment is made is first cut to such length and width as required for individual figure and form and the top portion marked and cut as illustrated in Figure

3. The curved portions 1—1 in the pattern are folded over on themselves to form the lapels 2—2. The edges 3—3 and 4—4 are then tucked under and joined by a seam 5 and the points 6—6 attached to the periphery of the downwardly curved portion 8 to form the pleats 9—9. The bottom of the arm hole will then include the portion 10. The rear ends 11—11 of the portions 1 are then sewed together at 12 to form the collar at 12^a.

A pocket 13 and tie cord 14 or other fastening means may be added.

What is claimed is:

1. A sleeveless one-piece robe as described composed of a single sheet of material, having parallel opposite side edges, said piece being provided at its opposite top corners with arch-shaped projecting portions forming lapels when folded over, said sheet having a central upwardly projecting portion in its top edge adapted to be joined to the ends of said lapels, recesses between the central projecting portions and said lapels for arm holes and smaller recesses in the arm hole portions to form pleats when the robe is sewn together.

2. A sleeveless one-piece robe as described, comprising a single piece of material with parallel opposite side edges the opposite top corners of the piece being curved outwardly and inwardly, said piece of material having a central upwardly projecting portion in its top edge, a series of recesses on each side of said upwardly projecting portion and between said portion and the curved top corners; said corners adapted to be secured to the projecting portion to form lapels and sleeve holes with pleats in said sleeve holes.

In testimony whereof I have signed my name to this specification.

Mrs. MARY R. LUCK.
