(54) Title: DIGITAL SYSTEM AND METHOD FOR BUILDING EMERGENCY AND DISASTER PLAN IMPLEMENTATION

(57) Abstract: An emergency and disaster preparedness implementation system hosted on an integrated computer system with a secure network interface (14). At least one terminal (12) for user interface to the system communicates through the network interface. The system includes a security management module (220) for user authentication and connects an authenticated user into the system. A communications module (18) provides and sets active alerts all users. An administrative console (16) provides management of system functions. A learning management system (26) is operable from the system and incorporates a plurality of function specific databases (418-440) for user information on all aspects of the building structure, content and environs. A portable emergency response tool (ERT) (12) operable independently or through the network interface is an integral portion of the system. The ERT has at least a portion of the plurality of function specific databases integrally stored thereon and functions specifically for use by first responders separate from or communicating with the overall system.
