UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE.

JULIUS PAULSEN, OF NEUENKIRCHEN, GERMANY.

BABY-CARRIAGE.

SPECIFICATION forming part of Letters Patent No. 587,755, dated August 10, 1897.

Application filed July 27, 1895. Serial No. 557,360. (No model.) Patented in Germany October 4, 1894, No. 82,277; in Switzerland May 22, 1895, No. 10,267, and in England May 30, 1895, No. 10,738.

To all whom it may concern:

Be it known that I, JULIUS PAULSEN, a subject of the King of Prussia, Emperor of Germany, residing at Neuenkirchen, near Blankenmoor, in the Kingdom of Prussia and German Empire, have invented certain new and useful Improvements in Baby-Carriages, (patented in Great Britain May 30, 1895, No. 10,738; in Germany October 4, 1894, No. 82,277, and in Switzerland May 22, 1895, No. 10,267,) of which the following is a specification.

The present baby's carriage is of ordinary form and is provided with a device A, having the object to prevent babies from falling out of the carriage.

In the accompanying drawing the figure is a side elevation.

The protecting device consists in a number of balls arranged side by side on a rod and of such dimensions that the hand of a child covers only a part of the ball and cannot hold it. This row of balls is arranged on the length sides of the carriage, where children generally place their hands when they try to get up. As soon as a baby tries to get hold of the sides of the carriage in order to stand up therein or to lean over one of the edges of the carriage the balls A turn toward the inside, the hand slips off consequently, and the child is prevented from rising.

Having thus described my invention, what I claim, and desire to secure by Letters Patent, is—

A baby's carriage having on the side of the basket or body of the carriage balls A A pivoted and adapted to turn when grasped, substantially as set forth.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand in presence of two witnesses.

JULIUS PAULSEN.
