The invention relates to a composition for printing ink. The composition relates more particularly, to a lithographic printing ink, for instance a so-called heatset ink, suitable for printing newspapers, leaflets, magazines as well as packaging material. On the basis of this composition according to the invention, the use of mineral oil in the composition for printing ink can be substantially dispensed with.