(54) Title: DEVICE, SYSTEM AND METHOD OF ADJUSTABLE TELESCOPIC LEGS

Figure 1

(57) Abstract: An adjustable telescopic leg system that is adapted to fit on at least one of a plurality of connected supporting side members that rest on a ground surface. The system comprises at least one longitudinally adjustable telescopic leg having a sawtooth like structure facing towards a latch. The structure may be formed by a plurality of depressions on the leg. The latch may be adapted to fit between an upper and a lower edge of the depressions. The system may further comprise a fixation rod connecting the latch with a release handle for longitudinally adjusting the position of the adjustable leg. The handle may have two positions: a locked position whereby the latch may be pressed against the depression when the release handle is in a straight position; and an unlocked position whereby the latch may be retracted from the depression when the release handle is in a tilted position.
