(54) Title: SPECTACLE AND WRITING INSTRUMENT COMBINATION

Fig. 1

(57) Abstract: A spectacle and writing instrument combination which uses an integrated holding apparatus enabling spectacles to be worn simultaneously with an attached writing instrument. The integration of the holding apparatus as part of the spectacles also allows the writing instrument to be directly attached to the spectacle frame. The use of this spectacle and writing instrument combination offers immediate and practical access to the attached writing instrument, enabling the wearer to detach the writing instrument for use when required, and re-attach after use. The wearer has the freedom to use the spectacles without disruption whilst being able to directly access the attached writing instrument at all times. Therefore a more efficient spectacle and writing instrument combination is provided. Writing instruments can include pens, pencils, styluses and specialty trade writing instruments. Spectacles have a wide range of functions which may include vision aids, safety spectacles and sunglasses. Therefore integrated holding apparatus for attaching writing instruments to spectacle frames can vary according to the specific writing instrument, spectacle frame and materials used. Examples of the many possible integrated holding apparatus can include clip-type holders, magnetic connections and hollow recesses formed within the spectacle frame. The holding apparatus can be integrated in various locations including the right or left-side spectacle temple, or brow section of the spectacle frame front. By integrating the holding apparatus, the spectacle and writing instrument combination becomes one whole appliance, therefore creating greater stability and ease of use.
