Abstract: A restraining system for hand held electronic devices with a case for the specified device, and attachment in the back of the case; a strap being mounted in the back of the case by means of attachments receiving a user's hand or finger. A preferred embodiment includes the case assembled with the device to form a single unit, and the strap mounted in the back of the case or unit by means of attachments, stretched to receive and trap the user's hand or finger between the unit, as to keep the cased device from moving freely from the palm of the user, and prevents cased device or unit from falling while in use. A preferred embodiment includes the unit flipped over to rest on top of the user's hand as to carry or use the cased device, and to allow the user to perform other activities.
