(54) Title: CREATING SOCIAL GROUP EVENTS

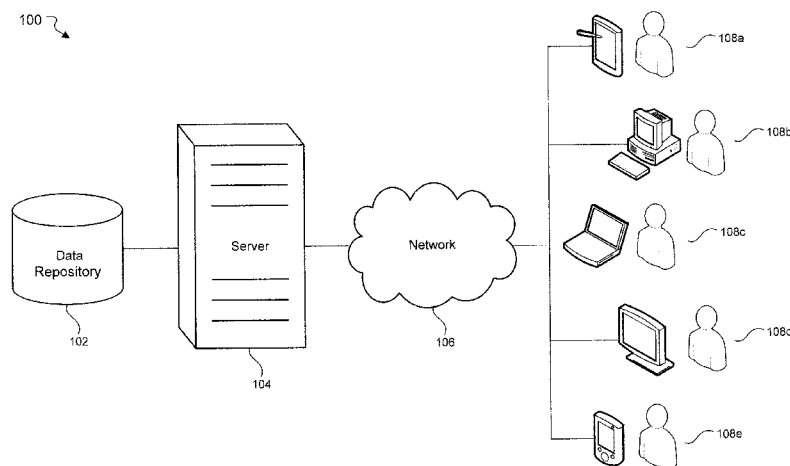

FIG. 1

(57) Abstract: Systems and methods for creating a social group event are provided. User interactions corresponding to two users are received and at least one common interest between the two users is identified from the received user interactions. A determination is made as to whether there is a relationship between the two users. When it is determined that there is a relationship, a social group event is suggested for the two users based on the identified at least one common interest with at least one of a specified time or a specified location based on the received user interactions.
